Dear sirs,

We have been retained by CNG Auto Group, Inc. to address your claim regarding the floor plan granted to them. Upon revision of the email sent by you to my clients, it is patently clear that you have not complied with the conditions of the guaranty contract signed between the parties to demand the return of the inventory or declare default. Should you pursue this course of action and attempt to obtain a court order to recover the units or report your allegations to Manheim Corp., Auction Insurance Agency or any credit bureaus thus causing irreparable damage to our client's business, you shall be liable for any and all damages suffered for your negligent action and your breach of our contract.

Furthermore, your actions regarding the withholding of the unit titles even after the sale of the unit is evidenced and payment for said unit is sent, constitutes a breach of the contract and will cause damages to CNG Auto Group, Inc. since the bank financing the purchase will resolve the financing contract if the title is not submitted to them. This will cause damages to our client's reputation and business. It is in fact your action, withholding the titles, that prevents our client from completing payment of the units contained in the floor plan.

We advise you to contact the undersigning attorney as soon as possible to discuss alternatives to resolve this impasse between the parties.

Cordially,

Manuel L. Morales Schmidt, Esq.
